

LAW FIRM

TRUSTED ADVICE

The Grand Duchy is a leading jurisdiction for M&A, private equity transactions and international group structuring. Independent law firms have found a fitting home in Luxembourg's financial district, advising clients across the sector.

PRESENTED BY STIBBE

An ever-increasing number of international companies are seeking to invest in and through Luxembourg. From M&A to private equity transactions, such investments demand reliable legal expertise. Since arriving in Luxembourg in 2010, Stibbe's team of legal experts have advised clients in matters across the broad corporate and finance field, including investment funds, tax and multinational and cross-border transactions.

A problem-solving approach

Besides the main offices in Amsterdam and Brussels, Luxembourg is a major hub for Stibbe. The firm also counts offices in Dubai, London and New York, to be close to important clients, but the activities remain focused on Benelux jurisdictions. What makes Stibbe special is its size combined with a uniquely independent spirit. "We want to offer a viable alternative from the major firms," says Gérald Origer, Executive Partner at Stibbe Luxembourg, of the 400-strong team working across the group. "We aren't part of an alliance. Our independence is reflected in the way we work: we do not work for our clients, we work with them and their teams to truly understand their businesses and needs, and give appropriate advice." This client-focused dedication has won the firm and some of its key team members accolades in the world's most prestigious rankings for the legal industry, such as Chambers and Partners, Legal 500 and ILFR 1000.

In full growth

Being the legal advisor of choice requires experts across the board. "We encourage an entrepreneurial approach among teams where everyone can contribute to the success of the firm," explains Origer. Stibbe recruited 12 new lawyers in the last three months to join its 36 multilingual staff at the Luxembourg office in Kirchberg. Four new partners also joined to further develop the investment funds, tax and corporate practices. "In comparison to other firms, we are still newcomers to the market, but we're already playing in the big league," says Origer. "Our goals for the future? To continue growing in a wise manner, including by promoting people internally. And to carry on doing things the way we always have: by doing our work seriously and with passion in the friendly and familiar environment that our clients value."
